The Wheeling, W. Va., Mayor is giving an itinerant party of female minstrels some valuable free advertising by destroying their loud lithographs.

The latest French physiological fairy story is to the effect that red-headed people never take small-pox. Another proof that there is a silver lining even for the Titaneuse.

MAUD S. was sold for enough money to buy over three miles of barbed wire, laid end to end, or enough to fill a space 700 feet square and ten feet high with leaves of bread.

The general and inexplicable crusade against the Mother Hubbard now going on over the land is discovered to have originated in Mrs. ELLA WHEELER-WILCOX's attempt to write poetry about the garment.

The Globe-Democrat republishes this morning the "Bivouac of the Dead," by way of preparing for the idea of November. It will take many columns of funeral verse to keep the mind down to the gloomy diapason which must then be sounded.

The appointment of the Rev. G. J. BRADY to be Vicar General of the Catholic archdiocese of St. Louis is only a step on the road to the episcopate. No man better deserves such preferment and none will be more heartily congratulated by his friends.

Is a Chino-Americano war should ever happen we could at least destroy the commerce of China by filling her rivers with obstructions in the shape of men-of-war. The American Navy is not to be dispersed by any nation that has roadsteads that could be spoiled by JOHN ROACH'S debris.

MR. JOHN L. DAVENPORT has drawn $120,710.20 from the Treasury for his services in the last six years, and all there is to show for it is his report on the Morey letter, a compilation of facts with which the public was familiar, and of guesses and inferences which are not worth two cents a car-load.

On the heels of the failure of a firm of Philadelphia banana merchants comes the forgery and attempted suicide of a New York fruit dealer. There must be something demoralizing in a traffic which culminates in bankruptcy and crime, and begins in an arrangement of all the good strawberries on the top of the box. As a field for missionary labor we know no place that clamors so loudly for attention as the Union Market.

MISS LAURA BRIDGER writes to a Southern California paper to state that the fact that J. ADDISON REAVIS, the Arizona millionaire, secured a license to marry her does not prove that the ceremony will take place, and, moreover, that it will not so occur. If Miss BRIDGER had been similarly sought by our member of the family, J. REDINGOTE REAVIS, we would bet dollars to doughnuts that she would have coyly assented.

The Remington Arm Company of New York has a contract to supply China with 130,000 Remington-Lee rifles and 100,000,000 cartridges. The company's agent just returned from China, says that she has thirty-five first-class gun boats and a standing army of 2,000,000 men. It is probable that China has learned something from her former brushes with European powers, and that France may find a tougher job on her hands than she bargained for.

ROBERT P. SMITH writes from Portland, Me., to the New York World that the Prohibition amendment to the State Constitution could be beaten at the polls but for the bargain between BLAINE and NEAL DOW. The latter says that BLAINE is pledged to vote for the amendment, and SMITH says BLAINE has deliberately pledged his influence and vote for the amendment in consideration of Dow's supporting him instead of St. JOHN. Dow's desertion of St. JOHN and preference for BLAINE certainly requires some explanation besides the fact that Dow's son holds a good fat appointment by the favor of Mr. BLAINE. A sufficient explanation, however, may be found in the fact that BLAINE and DOW have worked together in Maine politics for a quarter of a century.

Said a veteran woman of fashion the other day—"I can count sixty girls at one summer resort who will never marry. They are at every ball, every reception. They drive their own ponies, and it takes two men and two horses to take them about. They are pretty, with all the attractions of youth, but they will never marry. Their fathers are rich but will not cut up well when they die. They are brought up to spend money and must marry it or remain single. But the men of their own set will not marry except for some great advantage, and they know to a dot that the sixty girls I have counted over will not only be poor themselves but will have poor sisters." It is the old story of the moth and the candle. The glamour of fashionable life and the false idea that social coast and wealth are indispensable to happiness will convert the lives of more than half these girls into tragedies. Life is such a lottery, and its glided prizes are so few in proportion to the multitudes who scramble for them, that there are really more objects of pity among the children who are brought up in the glitter and whirl of fashion than among those who are trained to humbler roles and cheaper aspirations. But the folly of it is even more apparent when we consider the fact that the fortunes these girls are seeking will most probably pass before they die into the hands of men whom they would not marry now.

HOW TO BE BLUE-BLOODED.
The RHINELANDER family in New York, who are just now being cruelly exposed to the vulgar curiosity of the courts, make a spectacle of one side of the American character of which the other sides are not proud.

A cadet of the House of Rhinelanders contracted a mesalliance with a mere Irish girl, and after much heart-burning and grief that an aristocratic strain should be thus polluted, the wife was offered $20,000 cash and an annuity of $3,000, and the husband a round million, which came to him under his grandfather's will, to consent to a separation. Young RHINELANDER tried to kill the man who made the proposition for the family. His sanity was at once questioned and he was brought into court that the issue might be settled.

The testimony was curious. We hear of a joint expression of opinion among the family before the wedding that none of the race would stoop to a low marriage, and statements made separately that it would break hearts, and that such a thing would never do, all going to show that the union of a RHINELANDER with a common person would be nothing short of miscegenation. Later, at a family council, the young man who is now on trial, was fined ten dollars for insulting Mr. DRAKE, the person who since tried to arrange the separation.

Whether the RHINELANDERS trace their illustrious line to a great ancestor who sold sausages to the crusaders in the Holy Land, or whether their noble origin dates more recently to a time when the first RHINELANDER on record came to America and began to make money, we do not know. Our belief would be strongly in favor of the latter hypothesis. For we know that nothing goes so far to prove good blood and long descent as an intense hatred of the common people, and a proud and contemptuous bearing toward them. It stands with us in the same place that the Aimachne de Gotha occupies in Europe. We have known people in St. Louis whose ancestry is lost in the gloomy night of time two or three generations back, but who are able to multiply those ancestors ten-fold, to bear coat-of-armor, and to display the most azure blue blood simply by scolding their neighbors and loathing the vulgar herd. The RHINELANDERS are aristocrats of this new dispensation.

History is silent about them, and immemorial custom has not taught the multitude to do them honor. Hence in defense of their lofty position must they assert themselves rigorously and castigate us. Well, seeing that it cannot be helped, the common people must even grin and bear it. If the RHINELANDERS of America insist upon hating and despising the crowd, they may do so with impunity. But there is a remedy, and these despised commons should hasten to use it. Let them first lay up a little money, let them get an expert liar to crib a coat-of-arms for them out of Burke, and let them learn how to despise their fellows, and in a time so short that they will scarcely credit it, they, too, will be part of an American aristocracy.

WOLSELEY'S WORK.
Lord WOLSELEY leaves England for Egypt on Sunday to assume command of all the military forces there, and lead the expedition for the relief of GORDON. No better choice could probably have been made, and there is little doubt of the success of the expedition, so far, at least, as the reaching and relief of Khartoum is concerned. Whether GORDON will be found there alive is somewhat doubtful, but the last direct intelligence from him bearing date the middle of April, and the expedition is not expected to touch Khartoum before December 1. If EL MAHDI has not captured or killed the gallant Englishman by that time, then "the successor of Mohammed and the champion of Islam" has small knowledge of the art of war. But WOLSELEY has a much larger contract than the rescue of GORDON. The Government is now distinctly pledged, through the official declaration of Mr. GLADSTONE, to the reconquest and permanent occupation of the eastern portion of the Sudan, and if WOLSELEY can redeem this pledge nobody will grudge him the honors and rewards he has received for far less difficult work. The campaign which ended at Tel el Kebir was mere child's play compared with the present undertaking, the perilsous peculiarities of which have, we think, been very much underrated.

In the first place, to reach Khartoum the invading army must ascend the Nile in boats, or cross the desert from Suakin; either route involving difficulties and dangers sufficiently evident to need no specification. WOLSELEY must rely exclusively on his British troops, the Egyptian contingent not being worth their rations for fighting purposes. They are cowards, and moreover, not to be trusted; the most of them being strong sympathizers with the rebellion they are sent to crush, and consequently liable to desert to the enemy at the earliest convenient opportunity. This enemy, it must be remembered, is a very different stock from that which followed the banners of ARABI, and was wiped out of existence in a single battle which did not amount to a respectable skirmish. EL MAHDI's men are mainly Arabs, of the same blood and breed as those who annihilated BAKER PASHA, and came uncomfortably near doing as much for General GRAHAM. A foe who, armed only with spears and sticks, can stand a charge of British cavalry, and temporarily throw into confusion the finest infantry in the British service—the forty-second Highlanders, "Black Watch"—is not to be despised. Of course, discipline and modern weapons must, in the end, prevail over a mob of barbarians, however brave; but it will not do to make a single blunder in a country unanimously hostile to the invaders, when the latter are hundreds of miles from the nearest support, and their antagonists are confessedly the most dangerous uncivilized force with which England has ever had to deal. A British reverse, however slight, is liable to end in a wholesale slaughter, such as that of which HICKS PASHA and his 20,000 men were the victims.

But, conceding that WOLSELEY will make his way to Khartoum, whipping the rebels whenever they give him a chance, how can he reconquer and permanently occupy half of that vast territory known as the Sudan? Food and water in quantities sufficient to sustain an army cannot be obtained in that miserable country; Europeans cannot survive the deadly climate for any length of time; and the rebels—virtually the whole population—are so widely scattered and can retreat so rapidly, that a decisive battle is practically out of the question. WOLSELEY may march his army from one end of the Sudan to the other and he will be no nearer conquering it than when he began. As for permanent occupation by British garrisons, he might as well attempt to establish an ice-house in the infernal regions. The utmost he can hope to achieve is the relief of Khartoum and the rescue of GORDON if he is there. When these are accomplished, WOLSELEY, we fancy, will be ready to come home, and the Government equally willing to have him do so.

READJUSTED BANK.
A cable dispatch from Paris tells of the conviction and sentence of the directors and managers of the Banque de Lyons et Loire, which failed some years ago. The sentences imposed fines and imprisonment both. Among the convicts was M. SAVARY, formerly a member of the French Chamber of Deputies and at one time Under-Secretary of State.

Simultaneously comes a legislative committee's report on the failure of the Planters' and Mechanics' Bank of Petersburg, Va., from which it appears that it also suffered from too much political "infatuation" and too close a connection with the statesmanship of the country. With a capital of only $119,550, it had allowed the money of its confiding depositors to be taken out on overdrafts by influential parties to the enormous amount of $1,111,510. In fact, the bank appears to have been run as a mere tender to MAHONEY's political machine. After loaning Gov. CAMERON $31,400 on collateral worth perhaps half the amount, the managers allowed him to overdraw his cash to the amount of $4,900. State Senator GAINES had overdrawn $6,000; Senator MAHONEY $4,000; his son's firm, INOX & MAHONEY, $15,000; State Attorney BLAIR $1,300, and so on.

Of course, this Virginia concern, like its French congener, went the way of all political rackets. But here the similarity ends. No punishment will be meted out to the men who robbed the Virginia depositors. The very cashier whose account was overdrawn $15,000 will not even find it necessary to skip over to Canada and mock at his victims from a foreign shore. That awful punishment is reserved for extreme cases like that of the Albion bank president, who got away with millions and refused to divide with influential parties.

All his life Col. THEODORE O'HARA bore in silent agony the misprints of his poem "The Bivouac of the Dead." After his death Col. DICK WINTERMITH undertook to set the press right, and many a correct copy has been printed. But the Globe-Democrat prints it this morning with the old errors and some new ones, such as "varished tear" for "vanished year," and "mother's breath" for "norther's breath."

Our Sunken Navy.
The long-lost for result has come. Secretary Chandler has been warned time and again to keep the navy in out of the dew, and above all things, not to permit it to venture out of doors after dark. Ever and anon his attention has been called to the fact that a floating bale of cotton, or something of that kind, might come in contact with our iron-clads, but he chose to keep right on in his heedless ways. The result is that the navy is now at the bottom of the sea.

Of course the fault lies with the schooner. Just before the captain of that craft could have been thinking of when he bumped against the United States navy and five or six trunks of Secretary Chandler's effects is a mystery. If he sought a quarrel, why couldn't he have pitched into some one of his own size? The many thing, under the circumstances, if he had desired fair play, were close, uniformed and equipped, turned out in their thousands. Each member presumably represented a vote.

Of course an investigation should be ordered at once. Unfortunately, the Republicans are not in control in Congress, so that the several millions of dollars necessary for a proper vindication and the sewing on of a canvas patch cannot be secured, but the guilty schooner should be severely dealt with.

The Campaign in Illinois.
The most rigidly non-partisan journal ever published could not fail to note the difference between the way in which the Democrats and Republicans are conducting the campaign in this state, and especially in this city—where the former party claims its irreconcilable its fondest own. From time to time clubs have paraded, and they have always been Blaine and Logan organizations. So complete is the party plan for the campaign that when, on Saturday night, the Republican candidate for the Vice-Presidency was to be received in State, some clubs, uniformed and equipped, turned out in their thousands. Each member presumably represented a vote.

As for the Democrats, they have scarcely been heard of. That they have political clubs we know, but very little is heard of or from them. The aggressive campaign that was to drive the Republicans to the wall with a steady push, maintained from the first day, has seemingly resolved itself into empty air. The independent observer of the tactics of both parties can only look on and wonder what it all means. No opposition processions; no one but "Our Carter" speaking, and his speeches being wholly personal to himself; no marching by torchlight; no enthusiasm.

Mrs. Parnell.
The story that Mrs. Parnell, daughter of Commodore Stewart—"Old Ironsides"—of our navy and mother of the noted Irish agitator, came to this country to dispense of the Irish vote in the coming election, and was received with unbounded enthusiasm, every member of Cleveland's name was present, and who measured in his completeness the demonstration. "I have never seen a lady so well received in my life," they are wild for her. "I have never seen a lady so well received in my life," they are wild for her. "I have never seen a lady so well received in my life," they are wild for her. "I have never seen a lady so well received in my life," they are wild for her.

interests by voting the Democratic ticket?" Mrs. Parnell said: "Most assuredly I do not. There can be no question that the Democratic party is the party for the workingman to support, and the party which will best care for the citizens of foreign birth." This sounds like "Old Ironsides" himself, who was an earnest Democrat as this country ever produced.

MEN OF MARK.
BORN ROSSIGNOL, the gifted son of Bjornstjerne Bjornson, is stage manager of a Norwegian theater, in Norway.

MR. CLEVELAND is to return to Albany from the Adirondacks this week. He has gained twenty pounds since his vacation began.

THE METROPOLITAN PRESS.
What the Editors of the New York Journals Are Saying To-Day.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.
New York, August 29.—THE WORLD says: "If any doubt existed as to the sentiment of Irish American citizens of New York City, the magnificent demonstration at the Academy of Music last night will certainly dispel it. Within a few minutes of opening of doors every seat was occupied. The stage was packed with representative Irishmen, and thousands of men unable to gain admittance thronged the streets outside. The speeches of Senator Jones of Florida, Congressman P. A. Collins of Boston, Congressman Hines of Buffalo, and Gen. J. B. Bourke were received with unbounded enthusiasm. Every mention of Cleveland's name was greeted with a shout. An old politician who was present, and who measured in his completeness the demonstration, said: 'I have never seen a lady so well received in my life; they are wild for her. I have never seen a lady so well received in my life; they are wild for her. I have never seen a lady so well received in my life; they are wild for her.'

The men who fight everywhere for human liberty and the rights of man can never forget the sacrifice of the Democratic party of this country in their behalf. They know that under the banner of Democracy are found the foes of intolerance and fanaticism, and they will stand there as usual this year, standing shoulder to shoulder for Cleveland.

THE SUN.
The Sun says: "As Mayor of Buffalo Mr. Cleveland congratulated his fellow-citizens on the prosperity of an institution which taught young men their duty to their fellows and the State and which was, therefore, a safeguard against temptation to a career of viciousness. He regarded the Young Men's Christian Association as an adjunct which made easier his own efforts to give the town good government."

THE TIMES.
The Times says: "The Irishmen of this city made an enthusiastic political demonstration at the Academy of Music last evening. It was, in the highest sense, a representative affair. Those concerned in getting it up included many of those of American and Irish birth who had attained high prominence and influence in this community. The object of the meeting was to testify to the attachment of Irishmen to the Democratic party in this country, and to their purpose of supporting its candidates in the present canvass, thus dispelling the illusion that they are attracted by the character of Mr. Blaine or the blarneyings of Gen. Butler to break up their past political affiliations."

THE TRIBUNE.
The Tribune says: "The people of Maine are fairly flooded. The same Democratic management which flooded their State with corruption money just before the election four years ago is preparing to try it again. The same old story of bribery and forgery, the same past masters in bribery are at work this year for Cleveland and reform. Meanwhile, the Democratic organs are busily engaged in preparing their readers to hail any Republican majority less than 20,000 as a Republican defeat."

A Leopard in a Telegraph Office.
A leopard was killed in the telegraph office at Bella station on the Patna and Gaya line at about 1 p. m. on the 21st ult. The station is situated about seven miles from the Barabari hills, where these animals are said to abound. The creature evidently strayed into a neighboring village, whence being chased by the villagers, he got first into the station master's office and thence into the telegraph office. The peon on duty had the presence of mind to shut the door, which effectually confined the beast. Soon afterward the mail train arrived at the station and the driver of it shot him dead.

Twins as Alike as Two Peas in a Pod.
From the Detroit Journal.
Jackson has two modern Dromios, Quinton and Nungay Walker, twins, aged 20 years, who look alike, dress alike and appear alike, so that even their families can scarcely tell them apart. They were married on the same day, weigh the same number of pounds and agree on all questions except politics. One will vote the Greenback and the other the Prohibition ticket.

The Wild Warbler.
From the Chicago News.
We are glad to hear that John A. Logan, Jr., has been acquitted of the charge of profanity by the court-martial at West Point. We would be still more pleased to feel that John A. Logan, sr., could be acquitted of the charge of constant and flagrant desertion of the English language. His recent journey through the State of New York appears to have been a prolonged rhetorical saturnalia.

Complex Reasoning.
From the Louisville Courier-Journal.
Why is it that one woman who wants to get on a street car always wants to get on before the half-drawn who want to get off?—(Merchandise Traveller. Because if the women who are about to get off can be made to stay on a little longer, more seats will be occupied, and the woman getting on can get another man out of his seat.)

Rough on the Church.
From the New York World.
It may now be accepted as a settled fact that Mr. Elkins, like all the other working Republicans, is a church-going man. The Rev. Mr. Elkins has given what may be called an orthodox pedigree of him. He joined the church in the year 1870. All this is very creditable to Mr. Elkins, but does it ever occur to the Tribune that it may be rather rough on the church?

Origin of the Cholera Scare.
From the Pittsburgh Press.
It is now hinted that the cholera scare was started by the sagacious agriculturist with the unprotected orchard. He forgot, no doubt, that the cholera germ rarely perishes the daily newspaper, having other and more important business to engage his attention at this season of the year.

Not in the Swim.
From the London Truth.
It has often occurred to me as being exceedingly absurd that, owing to insular notions about decency, ladies in a fashionable English watering place are not allowed to bathe with their male relatives, and are thereby largely prevented from learning to swim.

A Growing Governor.
From the New York Herald.
Governor Crittenden of Missouri, who has been catching muskies in Wisconsin waters, is described as a great, tall, broad-shouldered man, with bright blue eyes, waxy complexion, thick hair as white and glossy as floss that the ladies do South Kensington with.

A Likeness of the Star-Eyed Goddess.
From the Victoria Commercial.
A large Pine tree in the yard of Mr. G. V. Moody, in Fort Victoria, now presents a very singular appearance. It is entirely covered with a winter white, and when viewed from a little distance the top presents almost perfect profile of a female head.

The Western Style.
From the Denver Opinion.
There is a poem in the death of Charlie Hampton in the way they have of late. There are three more, chapters granted to local capitalists last fall and winter, and so far I fail to see where they have turned a shovel full of dirt on the proposed roads. The fact that foreign capital is building the cable road does not detract from the advantages that will redound to the city and the people when it is complete."

Philosophy and Observation.
From the Somerset Journal.
"Why does a dog chase his tail?" a philosopher asks. "We do not think it will add much to the sum of human knowledge to answer this question correctly, but we imagine a dog chases his tail because there is a flea on the end of it."

The Newest Thing in Pillows.
From the New York Sun.
Hygienic pillows are now in vogue. There form a full equipment for a bed, of which one is filled with hops, a second with pine needles, and a third with marine moss. They are believed to cure sleeplessness and nervous disorders.

Serious Drought in Texas.
From the Fort Worth Chronicle.
Water is so scarce along the roads that a couple of young men coming from San Antonio on Tuesday, with a bottle of whiskey, were glad to be able to exchange half their whiskey for an equal amount of water.

Love's Young Dream.
From the Albany Times.
"Promise me, dear husband," said young Mrs. Newbridge, affectionately, to Charles—"Promise me never, in your darkest hours, ever to commit suicide. I am told it will vitiate your life insurance."

A Gay Tombstone for the Tallapoosa.
From the Chicago Herald.
Reform is necessary. That would be a good motto to paint in red letters on a buoy over the spot where the Tallapoosa went down.

An Open Letter.
From the Brooklyn Times.
An open letter—the one that comes to the house addressed to you in a lady's handwriting, if you will receives it from the postman.

Divorce Statistics.
From the Courier-Journal.
In Ohio there is one divorce to every seven marriages. The other six pairs are probably married by their parents.

The Burned Child Dreads the Fire.
From the New York World.
It is a wise young man who early makes up his mind that gamblers know more about gambling than he does.

Town the Family Bible, Etc.
From the Norwich Herald.
When Vanderbilt wants to raise a little cash to pay his bill, he sells a horse for $40,000. We never do that.

A Chance for Denis.
From the New York World.
If Denis Kearney is really in earnest, he will join the French army in China at once and do his level best.

A Sting of a Hornet Causes Death.
From the Valley News.
An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Ashby died from the sting of a hornet on last Thursday week.

REAL ESTATE.

The Transfers and Loans Made During the Week.

The Ruling Rate of Percentage on Loans—No great Demand for Money—The Cable Road—How the Stopping of Work Has Affected Property Along the Line.

There is a slight discrepancy in the statements of the real estate men this week as to the ruling rate of percentage on loans. With some it is 8, some 7 and others 6 per cent. Mr. J. E. Gifford said: "Why 8 per cent is absurd. I can get you plenty at 6, and all and more than you want at 7."

"What do you say, then, is the ruling rate?" "Six per cent. I have filled all demands at six and have several thousands more at present to put out at the same rate."

"Has there been a great demand for loans the past week?"

"No, rather light. I have made three or four—but none of them more over than usual." Mr. Terry of Terry & Son, speaking on this subject, said: "You know the money market has been very tight for the past six days and but few loans were in consequence effected, and then only at a high rate. Now there is plenty of money on the market at 6 per cent, and I take this as an excellent sign in more ways than one. Notwithstanding this, however, there is no reason that there have been but few loans negotiated during the week, there being little or no demand for money from this source. Transactions in real estate have also been quite light and little or nothing has transpired to break the monotony that has prevailed during the summer months."

During the progress of a game of cards in one of the saloons in Whiskey Chute, near the city, last night, the players quarreled and struck beer glasses as weapons. John Curry was struck in the forehead with a glass, receiving a very ugly cut. Curry will swear out a warrant against his assailant.

The East St. Louis Gas Company and the city officials are at logger heads again and in all probability the city will in a few nights be left in total darkness. The contract calls for a settlement every month, but although the council allowed last month's bill the company have been unable to collect the money. The fund set aside for the payment of gas bills is in possession of John M. Sullivan, and when the bill was presented to him he refused to pay it. The gas company insist on getting the money before furnishing more gas, and Mr. Sullivan has left town and no one else has authority to pay the money. The council will see that the street lamps will not be lighted next week.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

Gas to Be Shut Off—A Saloon Row—Other Items.

The Young Men's Democratic Club will organize at the City Hall to-morrow night.

The funeral of Mr. Frank Palmer, who died yesterday, will take place to-morrow morning, to St. Henry's Cemetery.

Lizzie Jackson and John McCann, colored, were arrested this morning for disturbing the peace and were each fined $3 and costs.

The Council will hold a regular meeting Monday night, provided the two members now on the sick list are sufficiently recovered to attend.

W. J. Fisher, agent of the St. Louis and Cairo Road at East St. Louis, emphatically denies that there ever was one cent of interest in relation to the company's affairs.

During the progress of a game of cards in one of the saloons in Whiskey Chute, near the city, last night, the players quarreled and struck beer glasses as weapons. John Curry was struck in the forehead with a glass, receiving a very ugly cut. Curry will swear out a warrant against his assailant.

The East St. Louis Gas Company and the city officials are at logger heads again and in all probability the city will in a few nights be left in total darkness. The contract calls for a settlement every month, but although the council allowed last month's bill the company have been unable to collect the money. The fund set aside for the payment of gas bills is in possession of John M. Sullivan, and when the bill was presented to him he refused to pay it. The gas company insist on getting the money before furnishing more gas, and Mr. Sullivan has left town and no one else has authority to pay the money. The council will see that the street lamps will not be lighted next week.

sour work on the church, and, instead of having the graceful walls already reared, not a solitary brick has yet been raised above the foundation.

Rev. P. R. Robson, a local preacher, will occupy Albert Jupp's place at St. Luke's Sunday morning.

In the evening J. A. Field, esq., will read a paper which he is preparing to deliver in the near future to the meeting of the Ministers Association at Farmington, on "Christian Education."

The Tuesday evening song services conducted by the railway department of the Y. M. C. A., at which Rev. G. Van Meter, superintendent of the Italian Bible and Sunday school mission, will speak on the subject "The Years Under the Shadow of St. Peter and the Vatican." The address will be illustrated by specially prepared maps of Italy and Rome.

Rev. Dr. Curry, the celebrated Hebrew scholar of the Methodist Church, who has been lecturing quite extensively throughout the country the past summer, is the divine who, in a ministerial meeting in Chicago last winter, made the statement that "the Pentateuch is unknown," and "that there is no Hebrew literature greater than the Captivity." These remarks being fully reported in the press, the Hebrew Church was much surprised.

The average contributions for all objects of the eleven organized Presbyterian Churches of St. Louis are as follows: First, $32,672; Second, $29,727; Third, $21,111; Memorial Tabernacle, $18,986; Westminster, $17,700; Carondelet, $17,447; Glasgow Avenue, $17,107; German, $15,115. The average for the Northern Assembly was $16.50 per year, and for the synod of Missouri, $15.

Extensive and expensive repairs are being made on the Church of the Holy Communion, Lexington and Washington avenues. The unemployed space of the edifice is being built up to accommodate an enlargement of the church where the orchestra has been located. Hereafter the organ stand in the recess thus provided, and somewhat nearer the front of the building. All the space in the church will be properly separated from the auditorium proper, in order to make an assembly room for the Sunday school. The cost of the improvements will be about $10,000.

THE NEW VICAR-GENERAL.
The honor which is secured to Father Brady, pastor of the Church of the Annunciation, by his official notification to-day of his appointment as Vicar-General of the English-speaking parishes, will be a source of surprise to those who have watched his steady progress toward favor in the highest church circles. When a recent former Chaplain of the Bishop of Davenport was made there was considerable disappointment expressed that Father Brady did not receive that appointment. As he was then stated in the Post-Dispatch his elevation to that position was the result of the selection of Father Cosgrove, a local priest. Father Brady, in new orders from the Bishop, was made Vicar-General Muehlhausen, whose duties are confined to the administration of the affairs of the German speaking churches.

He was born in St. Louis in the old Cathedral parish, and was educated in the University of Notre Dame, Kenrick, April 8, 1869. He conducted his first mission at New Madrid, Mo., where he labored three years, and then to the Church of the Annunciation, whose pulpit he has since ably filled. Something of his executive ability may be judged from the fact that when he took charge of the parish it was encumbered with a debt of $80,000, which, under his management, has been reduced to $10,000. This last appointment is of special interest, in view of the action Archbishop Kenrick will take in the near future in making the choice to be permanent Vicar-General of the English-speaking parishes, and select among the first Vicars General attempted to prevent the meeting. Becoming indignant at the proposed trick move, a recent former Chaplain of the Bishop of Davenport was made there was considerable disappointment expressed that Father Brady did not receive that appointment.
